Investors will again flock to the Faire

The National Antiques & Decorative Arts Faire, which takes place from July 24 - 26 at the Sandton Convention Centre, will again attract investors who are looking for safer havens of investing.

Royal Doulton 'Palio'.

The performance of the art, antique and collectable markets have, over the past decades, always brought better than average returns and, according to the experts, there will be a definite increase in these investments as the volatility of other markets surges. The intrinsic value of a Georgian armoire, a silver Irish tea set, rare coins or a signed Lalique vase, will offer, not only immense visual and tactile pleasure, but will be an asset that can only grow in value.

Moorcroft 'Town of Flowers'.

Meet the leading lights at the NAADA Faire

THE NAADA FAIRE attracts international exhibitors, among them Ricus Dullaert, a respected furniture dealer from Amsterdam who will be showcasing his selection of Dutch furniture, brass, pewter and icons.

Dullaert has been in South Africa since 2001. Besides dealing in antiques, he spends his time helping NGOs that care for orphans due to the Aids pandemic and also Aids patients.

Ed Pascoe, of Pascoe and Company in Miami, Florida, will once again be exhibiting his spectacular collectable range of porcelain.

This year Pascoe is celebrating his 40th year in the antiques business and he continues to specialise in Royal Doulton figurines, of which very special prestige designs will be showcased at the NAADA Faire 2009.

Over the years he has diversified into many other types of ceramic art, including Lladro porcelains from Spain and Moorcroft pottery from England - "Collectors Pick", which showcases the latest work from the celebrated artists in the Moorcroft Design Studio.

THE NAADA FAIRE

Antiques remain a safe haven in tough times

THE GENERAL QUESTION often asked in our shop - Yesterday's Dreams - in Bethlehem, is: "Why antiques? It is so expensive."

Our answer: "Investment!"

Yes, antiques seem to be expensive and a luxury to most people, but as a global trend and with the current economic crunch, it is considered one of the safest investments you can ever make - safer than putting money in the bank.

With the low interest rates and low returns on investments in banks, you will get a much higher return on your antique investment piece than an investment of cash in the bank, over a period of time.

It is always a good idea to shop around and do research on a piece you want to buy. Most antique dealers will be able to help you in that respect. Make sure you buy a good clean piece that has not been tampered with.

Take a friend or a person with you who knows his antiques, if you do not have the necessary knowledge yourself.

Inspect the piece, turn it over, get on your back on the floor and inspect it from underneath, take all the drawers out to make sure they are the same and have not been replaced. Always look for a reputable antique dealer and/or auctioneer, to buy from.

We at Yesterday's Dreams do just that. We have knowledgeable staff who can assist you with all your questions and can advise you on the best piece for you to buy as a good investment piece.

We have been in the antique business for the past 16 years and have built up the necessary knowledge to advise you in that regard.

Visit our showroom or website for a wide range of exclusive furniture and collectables, or contact one of our friendly staff to assist you in all your antique needs.

During the NAADA weekend, Louise Irvine, the expert on European ceramic art from London, will be giving daily presentations about Royal Doulton, Moorcroft and Lladró, on the Pascoe and Company stand.

Clyde on 4th Antiques - a leader in antiques trading, has transformed a living area into a decorator's dream by merging old and new - "Living with Antiques".

SA also boasts its own unique antiques:

- * Focusing on Furniture
- * Scintillating Silver
- * Precious Porcelain and China
- * The Glint of Glassware
- * Buried in Books, Prints, Maps and Militaria
- * The sparkle of Jewels and Vintage Clothing
- * Appreciating Art
- * Dabbling in Decorative Arts and Collectables

Gala opening night

The gala opening night of the National Antiques & Decorative Arts Faire, attracting the who's who of the collecting world, will gather on the evening of Thursday July 23 to sip champagne, drink wine (courtesy of Moreson and Haut Espoire Wine Estates) eat delectable snacks and marvel at what is without doubt the most impressive array of antiques, collectables and decorative arts under one roof.

The close to 500 collectors and celebrities don't miss this chance to be the first to see the Faire's exhibits and reserve their choice pieces with a red sticker. What better place to invest than in antiques that not only retain and increase their value over time, but are tangible, tactile and give immense pleasure.

THE NAADA FAIRE

Exciting world of antique silver

COLLECTING SILVER can be enjoyable and rewarding and the whole family can join in.

If you are collecting for the first time, start with something small, either for the home or for yourself. When you are buying silver, buy it because you like it, as you will have to live with the purchase.

If silver is too expensive, one can always buy EPNS (silverplated) which is more reasonable.

There are so many pieces for the home, such as challah dishes, chanukiahs, candlesticks, kiddush cups, tea sets, sweet dishes etc.

There is always something for everyone, whether you are buying for the first time or adding to your collection.

Antique Silver Repairs has a wonderful selection of silverware for sale; it will also repair and re-silver your old or damaged silverware.

If you want to sell your silverware, Antique Silver Repairs will buy it in any condition.

Visit Stuart and Laurence Tobin at the Antiques Faire, at Sandton Convention Centre from July 24 - 26 or at 13 Hathorn Avenue, Maryvale/Orange Grove, Johannesburg or tel: (011) 640-5934.

Clyde on 4th Antiques - a leader in antiques trade

Clyde Terry with Eric Knowles of BBC Antiques Roadshow fame when he was a guest at last year's National Antiques Faire.

WELL KNOWN not only as an antiques dealer who runs his successful antiques business from a beautifully restored house in Melville, Clyde Terry is also a mover and shaker in the antiques business, running not only the highly successful monthly Antiques Fair at Nelson Mandela Square, the newly opened Antiques Fair at Killarney Mall and the National Antiques Faire, but is also responsible for the phenomenal growth and popularity of the antiques industry - be it by mentoring new dealers or encouraging younger people to collect.

His antiques shop is a treasure trove of exquisite furniture, scintillating silver, highly collectable porcelain, sought after art as well as chandeliers, light fittings and general collectables.

On the question of whether now is the time to buy antiques, Clyde reports with confidence that through every recession, antiques have become the investment of choice.

"There is no question that people are looking for alternative investments to the stock market where you only realise your return when you sell. With top-end antiques you have tangible assets that you can enjoy and that will, over time always give solid returns."

People are also buying antiques for both decorative and practical reasons and are finding a myriad alternative uses for traditional antiques. An old linen press can once housed the TV is now a DVD storage unit or a drinks cabinet, and smaller furniture pieces are used to store linen and bathroom accessories.
